"Hot Sheiks"

Directed by Hampton del Ruth

A Paramount Picture

Synopsis

While traveling in Arabia an American explorer becomes involved with some very wealthy sheiks. He is a man of disreputable character. Though befriended by the sheiks, he rewards their hospitality by stealing the royal jewels, among them a very famous and valuable diamond. He escapes with his loot. The sheiks pursue him hotly and are about to overtake him. The explorer takes refuge in a house. Hard pressed to get rid of the jewel, he hides it in the upholstery of a chair.

The chair is later sold as an antique. By various stages and chances it comes at last to America. It becomes part of the stock of an antique store here.

Carter de Haven is a clerk in the antique store. He lives a very drab life. He has two cravings: one for the proprietor's pretty daughter and the other to have some big adventure.

Carter is having his usual dull day in the store when suddenly the descendants of the sheiks robbed by the explorer many years previous descend upon the antique store. They have at last traced the royal jewels there. They attack Carter, scare him half to death. They cut and slash all the stock in the store in their frantic search for the jewels.

Carter wins their favor by restoring the jewels to them. They reward him with a large sum of money, he wins the proprietor's daughter and lives happily ever after.
